

below the rising moon of autumn spirits drift upon the horizon leading to the great plains where once a people roamed.
the spirits walk and cry no more for the land is beyond their tears and the thundering echoes of buffalo are drowned out by a light wind.

copyright. BJFR 1994