

considering my passage

below the wet translucent plain a slipping backwards plow my paddle slows

to the river bank
where natives
consider my passage

cleared away
the fir trees are sparse
my canoe is made of fiberglass

as they turn away
into the cover of woods;
colored warriors

fade away
as if they were there
and not my imagination

BJFR 6-20-91