ministered there for seven years; thence via Wellington, Hillier, Nottawasaaga, and Bradford, he moved to the Church of St. John's to plan the long awaited new brick church and it was decided that a new church should be erected. Collection of funds and pledges proceeded and specifications and estimates were called for; the years 1892-93 saw the actual construction in progress and completed at a final outlay of $6,000. The new brick building, accomodating 300 worshippers, was ready for use in June 1893. On Saturday afternoon, June 10, there was a special opening service presided over by the Reverend Charles with the assistance of the Reverend T. W. Patterson and others. At the Sunday morning service next day, the Provost of Trinity College preached, and in the evening Reverend Charles entered the pulpit on what was undoubtedly one of the happiest days of his life. The burden laid upon him by a grave accident that befell his wife in 1895, coupled with the growing responsibilities of the missions, made it necessary for him to depend increasingly on his assistants. The Reverend Charles served St. John's in its new church until his death, after a long illness, on October 23, 1900." (Ruttan 1986, p.44).
