

"But superb as the individuals of this group are, and they each bring such lovely sounds to the music, it is in their collectivity that they shine. The clarity of their musical thought and the depths and insights they bring to their readings are what make an evening in their company so exceptional. The musical dialogue between them is erudite, absorbing and moving."

"The Canadian ensemble Trio Lyra has expanded the repertoire for this instrumentation considerably...There are fine performances by harpist Erica Goodman, flautist Suzanne Shulman, and violist Mark Childs throughout, and both sound and balance are exceptional"

Elissa Poole, The Globe and Mail, Toronto

"Trio Lyra fits perfectly with Impressionists...and when the players happen to be Erica Goodman, Suzanne Shulman, and Mark Childs, who wouldn't want to bend an ear?"

William Littler, The Toronto Star

"Through all the three players showed facility on their instruments and ease of ensemble...uncommon agility"

Robert Croan, Pittsburgh Post-Gazette

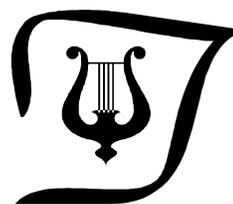

"Overall this is an excellent recording. All the playing is first-rate, and the recording is excellently engineered..."

From their first performance of the Debussy Sonate in 1978, the members of Trio Lyra have enjoyed a mutual devotion to beauty and perfection in musical expression which is instantly communicated to their audiences. Trio Lyra's repertoire ranges from Baroque to the best of today's composers. They have commissioned and premiered major new works from six of Canada's finest composers – Ben Steinberg, Srul Irving Glick, Milton Barnes, Harry Freedman, Andrew MacDonald and Marjan Mozetich. The nature of this combination of instruments has inspired a particularly rich selection of French repertoire, and Trio Lyra has been featured in all-French programs broadcast by the French CBC. The 1994-95 season saw tours in Quebec, Ontario and the United States with broadcasts on both the French and English national CBC networks, and in 1996 the trio appeared at the Sixth World Harp Congress in Seattle, Washington. Trio Lyra's debut CD, Music of Ravel, Debussy and Fauré, was released in September, 1997 on Opening Day Recordings, catalogue #9309, and includes the world premiere recording of the Fauré-Salzedo Dolly, Op. 56. Their second CD, Harbord Street, was released in the spring of 1999, and includes world premiere recordings of four commissioned works -- Milton Barnes' Harbord Street, Srul Irving Glick's Trio for flute, viola and harp, Harry Freedman's Touchpoints and Andrew P. MacDonald's Pleiades Variations, Op. 45. 1999-00 also saw concerts in Texas, Michigan, the Festival of the Sound, the Muskoka Lakes Festival, British Columbia and the Yukon. Concerts in 2000-2001 included Haliburton, Meadville, PA., Owen Sound, a tour to Atlantic Canada and concerts in Port Perry and Barrie. The new Mozetich work will have its premiere in October of 2002, and Trio Lyra's third CD – Lyra Hébraïque, Music of Jewish Composers – will be released by the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation in the Spring of 2003.
