

Sonnet 1

Talone's Sonnet

The world I know has long been lost to me,
The stars that guided me has long since died
And left me alone on a raging sea.
Across the open waves I cannot hide,
Nor find the sheltering home that I knew.
Beyond my sight lay wrecks of fallen love,
Without your touch, I'm sure to join them, too.
The sea reflects the darkness from above
With shadows of the monsters of despair
Who brush their scaly hides against the waves
To show that, unlike you, they will be there.
Against such odds it's only love that saves.
 My heart is lost and dark within the sea.
 Your light, your love, could only rescue me.
